1980

100 E. Woodbury Dr.
Dayton, Ohio

In the Beginning, Seedlings grow to strongly rooted trees, their sturdy trunks sending forth branches of rich fruit. So have our founders planted this Hillel seedling, sending forth each year a rich harvest from deep roots in Jewish Culture through sturdy dedication of its faculty. May we in turn find new ground in which to live, to grow, to flourish.

Beginnings

I search the stars from far away
Galaxies for answers to my Numerous questions.

There is still hope.
There is always hope,
For a new beginning.

Michael Fes

One of my teachers once described himself as a man who divides his time evenly between learning and wishing he were learning. I know just what he means. Learning for the Jew is not just an activity or a hobby. It is a passion, perhaps even an addiction. How else can we explain our fascination with learning? Think of the way we celebrate the completion of the Torah on Simchat Torah: - only we start reading it all over again! It is as if the Jews have turned the myth of Sisyphus on its head. We roll the stone of learning to the top of the mountain and joyously celebrate its tumble to the bottom where we can start to roll it up again.

Learning to us means plugging into the fundamental forces of reality. It is the way we get it together with G-d and ultimately the only way we get it together in ourselves.

Beginnings captures moments of study and moments of play; moments of solitude and moments of encounter; moments of joy. These pages chronicle through word and picture your school-life experience. Remember and learn.

MY HIGH

Barry S. Feldman

Our Torah begins with the words "Breishit Barah Elokim." The simple meaning of this phrase is "In the beginning G-d created." The Rabbis explain, however, that the word "Breishit" can be interpreted in the following manner. Since the Torah is referred to in Proverbs as "Reishit Darko," the word could mean "For the sake of Torah." Thus, for the sake of Torah the world was created. The concept of beginnings, of creation, connotes study of and fulfillment of Torah. Our beginnings too involve the learning of Torah. Our students have come together to pioneer in the creation of a complete elementary and secondary school devoted to excellence in Torah study and the integration of that study with an equally excellent program of general studies. Our faculty has tried to implant in the student the values of Torah. We hope to see these values manifested in a positive relationship with G-d and man. The word "beginning" implies continuation, growth, and fulfillment. It is our prayer that the dreams of our students will come to fruition and that they grow from strength to strength in the study and fulfillment of Torah.

DEDICATION

To the Eighth Grade-

A foot in the nursery
A head in the clouds,
Masters of the latest fad,
When every passing moment is an eon-

Non-stop fretters, quiz kids
of total trivia,
You flood the halls with every size, shape, stride, shrieks imaginable.

Oh, Irrepressible Eighth Grade, our bundle of beginnings, and beginnings again, we salute you with 1980's Beginnings

May it give you a past you can never forget, and wish you a future you'll live happy ever after.

Chaotic, yet unobtrusive
The stepping stones are overflowed with decisions.
Enigmatically, they contemplate
On the immediate future.

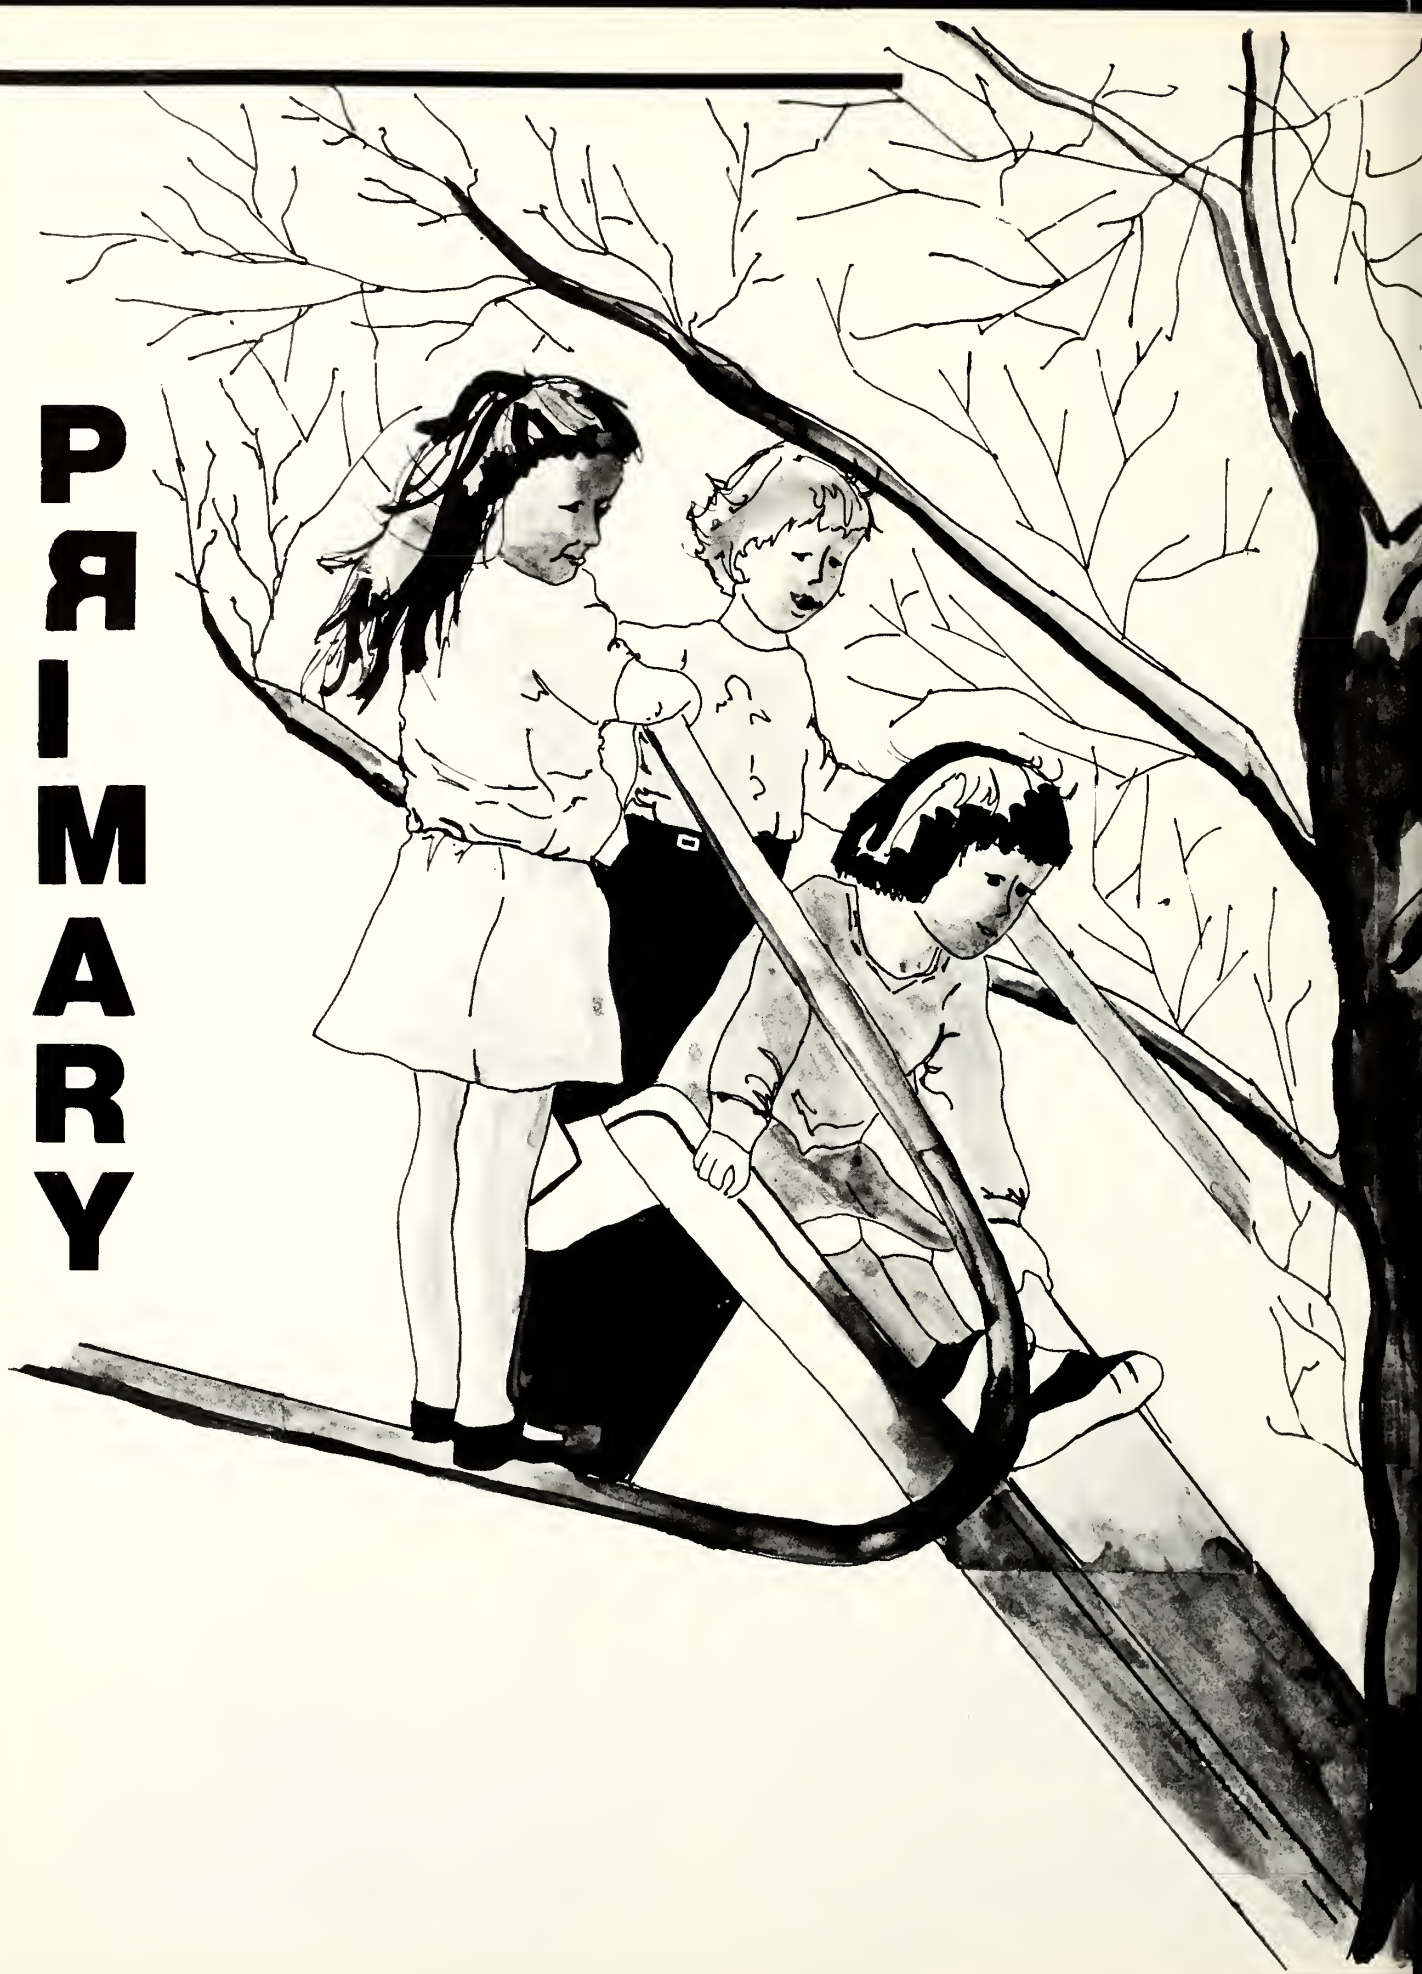

What does it hold in store?
Everyone has their specific interests.
Concentrating on them arduously
Finally arriving at their precipitous summit.

Their life has been a tedious odyssey
Yet everything now paying off.
Their interests fulfilled
Existence an actual privilege.

 Busrides with new friends,
 Coloring in books

 Learning the alphabet,
 Numbers, too.

Kindergarten,
Is a lot of fun,
We work and play,
Till the day is done.
When we come in,
We have our snack,
And then we go,
And hit the sack.
After we rest,
We work so well,
Reading and writing,
Until we hear that bell.

How do you like my new perm?

Come sail away with me.

Mrs. Carlson reminds me of the whole rainbow because she is nice, friendly, fun, exciting, cheerful, understanding, and very bright and colorful.

I like how our class works together nicely. It reminds me of red, orange, and yellow because those colors look nice together and that is how our class looks.

Reading

can be fun,

in any position!

To get up early in the morning
Isn't much fun,
Wait for the bus that will never come
When we arrive at school,
And gather our daily tools,
We find we're late for class,
Because of the daily task
Of gathering our books
With tired looks.

Class after class,
That seem to never pass.
We somehow make it to lunch,
And then begin to munch.
We find, as we walk back to class,
We have disturbed, as we pass
The kids still in class.

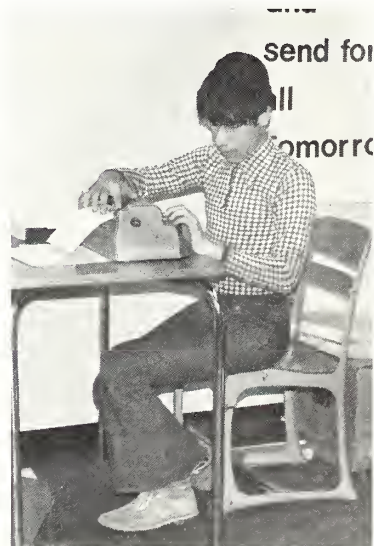

The
call of the wild!

After this, afternoon classes start,
And we battle the day with
Our teachers, the sweethearts.
In the last class we become restless,
And we clean up the mess,
As we prepare to leave school,
When the bell tolls,
At 3:34 by the rule.

When we get home,
We begin to roam,
All around our homes.
The homework we begin.
As we write with our pens,
Finishes,
As our day diminishes.

Twilight, Sundown,
Three bright stars in the sky,
As we light the candles and say
"Baruch Atah Adonai"

As our voices fill the air,
The Shabbos Queen walks in,
And the Shabbos feast begins.

L to R: Johnny Rosenstein, Daniel Press, David Berks, David Hone, David Zinner, Zachary Simon, Joshua Marwil.

Havdala, full of sorrow;
Yet, happiness for the oncoming week.
Holding onto the last rays of Shabbos.
One sees the glowing flames in the childrens'
glimmering eyes,
They say good-bye to the Shabbos Queen.
Sweet taste of wine, spicy smell of balm,
The Queen leaves, tears well in our eyes;
Yet, we know she will soon return.

Torah, a way of life,
a sign of manhood,
All of our past records
in one.
A gift from G-d, story
of our ancestors,
Composed of calf skin
on two scrolls,
Hebrew language, holiest
of all Jewish objects.

We work and learn by day

Dense green thickets,
Fall, cool pine trees
In a blazing sky.
Friendship and laughter
Ringing out among the hills.
Waterfalls stream down rocks
and valleys,
Their icy blue waters flowing.
Majestic sights as far as one can see
Of free, beautiful country.
Playing football with the staff
While trying to dodge, Mork, the crow.
Exhaustedly retiring after a full day,
While Nana Zurlage tucked us in.
Waking up to a shrill alarm
To the fresh new morning air.
Special activities at four 'oclock,
Nature sketching and square dancing,
Blind hikes and new games.
Lying in a damp field,
And gazing at the stars.
Night hikes and animal tracking,
Waiting for muskrats in the dark.
Living and learning in the wild,
About birds and all of God's creatures.
These are my memories of a free liberty,
And of my wonderful stay at Glen Helen.

Throughout the year, Hillel has been honored with many interesting speakers and guests.

Anne Hammerman, editor of the Dayton Jewish Chronicle, Peter Wells, Executive Director of the Jewish Federation, and Arnold Rosenfeld, editor of the Dayton Daily News were a few of our guest speakers at our monthly luncheons.

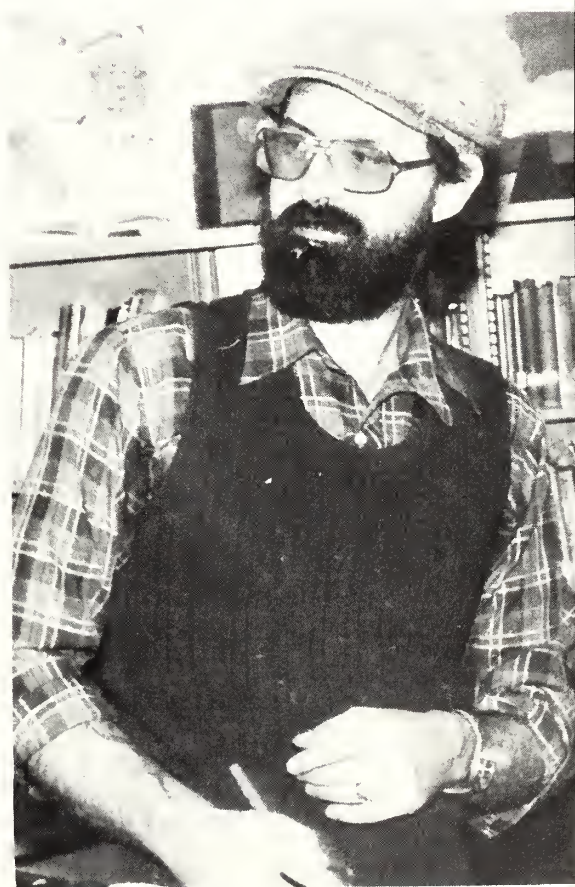

Can I find my poem in my thumb?

Neil Neimark entertained us, playing his guitar and teaching us many new Hebrew songs.

James Reese was our poet in Residence. He helped us to find poems in the facts and fantasies around us.

Journal Herald cartoonist, Bob Englehart, drew us marvelous "lies that tell the truth" about our teachers and ourselves.
